

For the Information of Parish Officers Re: Benefits for Parish Lay Employees (Current January 1, 2010)

Over the past several years there has been a marked increase in the number of parishes hiring lay employees for youth or music ministry, administrative support, building maintenance etc. Many of those parishes, and employees themselves, have raised the issue of the availability of pension and benefits participation. The following information may help in that regard.

Available Plans: The Pension Office of General Synod administers and provides access to a full range of plans for parish lay employees, including pension, long term disability plan, and a comprehensive benefits package. The benefits plan is national plans and premiums are set annually on a province by province basis.

General information: While there is no specific policy requiring that benefits be offered to qualifying lay employees, doing so is a strong example of fair employment practices.

Before offering pension/benefits participation, it is critical for the employing parish to first develop policies in the area of eligibility, waiting periods, premium cost sharing etc. This will help avoid inconsistencies and misunderstandings. That policy can include a "probationary" period for newly hired employees, during which there is no eligibility for participation in pension and benefits plans.

Generally employers cannot force employees to participate group plans. If an employee is offered participation in any of the plans and chooses to decline, the parish must have that in writing, and should offer participation again, at least annually.

Available Plans: The Pension Office of General Synod administers and provides access to a full range of plans for parish lay employees, including pension, a comprehensive benefits plan, and coverage under a long term disability plan. Application forms are available from the Synod Office.
